RUSSIA'S PROGRESS IN AGRICULTURE

Progressive Policy Pursued by Government—Lectures at Imperial Museum and Excursions to Suburbs of St. Petersburg.

Progressive policy generally prevails in Russia. Russia is most generously favored by nature, little progress is being made in agriculture. This is erroneous. As an illustration of the interest that is being manifested along these lines, and as indicative of the progressive policy that has been adopted and is now being pursued, it may be cited that the Imperial Agricultural museum, in its endeavor to popularize the study of agricultural subjects, has for the last few years conducted gratis, at the museum in St. Petersburg, a series of systematic readings on agriculture for the benefit of everyone interested. In addition to this course, popular lectures are delivered and special readings conducted for men in the lower ranks of the army. In the experimental department of the museum the taking apart and putting together of various machinery is demonstrated by trained mechanics. Agricultural machinery in motion is also demonstrated and the use of agricultural implements is explained; experiments are also made with all classes of farm machinery, such as looms, mowers, reapers, and the like. In separate departments are demonstrated the fertilization of the fish spawn and the development of the chicken in the incubator.

The attendance at these lectures has been uninterruptedly increasing from year to year. In 1906 it was 6,093, in 1907 it reached 17,808, in 1908 32,442, and in 1909, 60,346. The lectures are delivered in the evening from 7 to 9 and on Sunday from 2 to 3 p. m. The practical work and excursions are conducted by arrangements between the lecturers and the students, such as trips to exhibitions and farms in the suburbs, and even to stockyards and slaughterhouses. Likewise the special classes pass through practically everything pertaining to plant culture, stock raising, poultry raising, bee culture and dairy farming, with all that pertains to the latter, such as butter and cheese making.

In the first half of the present scholastic season, beginning in October, the courses of the systematic lectures subjects: Elementary chemistry, elementary anatomy, physiology of plants, improvement and cultivation of the soil, agricultural meteorology, agricultural economy, seeds, agricultural implements, cattle raising, swine raising, etc.

On Sundays it is intended to conduct popular public readings and lectures on a variety of agricultural subjects—From Consul General John H. Snow, St. Petersburg.
